

Westthorpe Colliery

Opened in 1923 employing 100 men. By 1947 when the National Coal Board took over, there were just fewer than 1,000 workers. The colliery closed in 1984 and reclamation began in 1997 to return the site to nature.

Westthorpe colliery ★

Has been both deep and opencast mined during its history. It was part of the South Yorkshire coalfield which produced the bituminous coal, needed for making coal gas and coke. This was then used in the manufacture of iron and steel.

River Rother ★

The River is around 27 miles long from its source in Pilsley, Derbyshire to where it meets the River Don in Rotherham and is the main feed source for the Chesterfield Canal. Due to the local industries, the river's water quality deteriorated and by 1974 was considered to be unable to sustain life. With the closure of the industries, the water quality has now recovered and provides a habitat for a wide range of wildlife including Water Voles and Kingfishers.

Killamarsh Station ★

Killamarsh had three railway lines running through it; the platform you can see is the former southbound platform, Killamarsh Central which was on the Great Central Railway line, later to become part of London and North Eastern Railway (LNER). The station closed in 1963 and the line closed fully in 1981, living out the end of its days serving Arkwright Colliery.

Refreshments

Killamarsh town centre has a range of shops and food outlets along with several public houses on or just off the route.

Car Parking

Is available at Killamarsh Shopping Centre, S21 1FY. Or some roadside parking is allowed in Westfield Road Industrial Estate, off Green Lane, S21 1TZ.

As you follow the route up to Park Hall, the village dominates the skyline to your right. Spinkhill is only a small village but has a historic past. It is first mentioned on a tax list known as a Pipe Roll in 1273. The name 'spink' in the Derbyshire dialect is any bird of the finch family, especially the chaffinch. Do you think this was a place where chaffinch roosted?

Spinkhill ★

This is an old pack horse route that links Eckington and Killamarsh and would have been well used, before the canal and railways were built, to carry goods between the villages.

Old Pack Horse Route ★

This is the line of the Chesterfield Canal designed by canal pioneer James Brindley, built 1771 - 1777. Forty six miles of Canal connect Chesterfield to the River Trent at West Stockwith. This section of the canal is still to be restored. For more information and to see how you can help visit www.chesterfield-canal-trust.org.uk

Chesterfield Canal ★

Once part of the Great Central Railway; this now forms part of the southern link of the Trans Pennine Trail. These embankments have little disturbance and are now a haven for plants and animals. Look out for the wildflowers and butterflies through the spring and summer.

St Giles Church

Killamarsh was mentioned in the Domesday Book under the name of Chineswoldemaresc. It was originally a farming community but boomed during the 19th and 20th century after the discovery of its rich coal supplies. This fed the Sheffield iron and steel industry. Take a little time to explore the churchyard of St. Giles and see if you can find the Saxon Cross and wooden stocks.
