Information

The Stanhope family resided here until the estate was sold. Derbyshire County Council subsequently purchased it in 1968 and opened the estate in 1970 as one of the first country parks in England. Today, both the buildings and gardens are registered (Grade 2 and Grade 2*) as being of special architectural and historical interest.

At the heart of the estate lies Elvaston Castle, a Gothic Revival masterpiece (not open to the public) redesigned for the third Earl of Harrington in the early 1800s and based on the original house, which dates back to 1633.

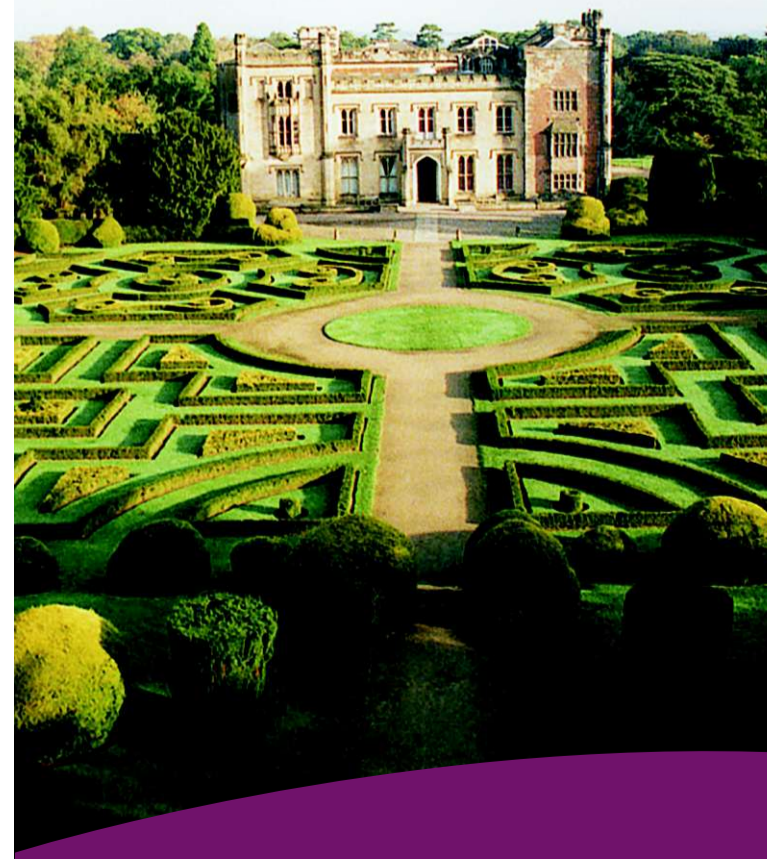

Located in Derbyshire, near to Derby and Nottingham, Elvaston Castle Country Park offers a glimpse into the past - encompassing around 200 acres of open parkland, woodland and more formal historical listed gardens.

Improving life for local people

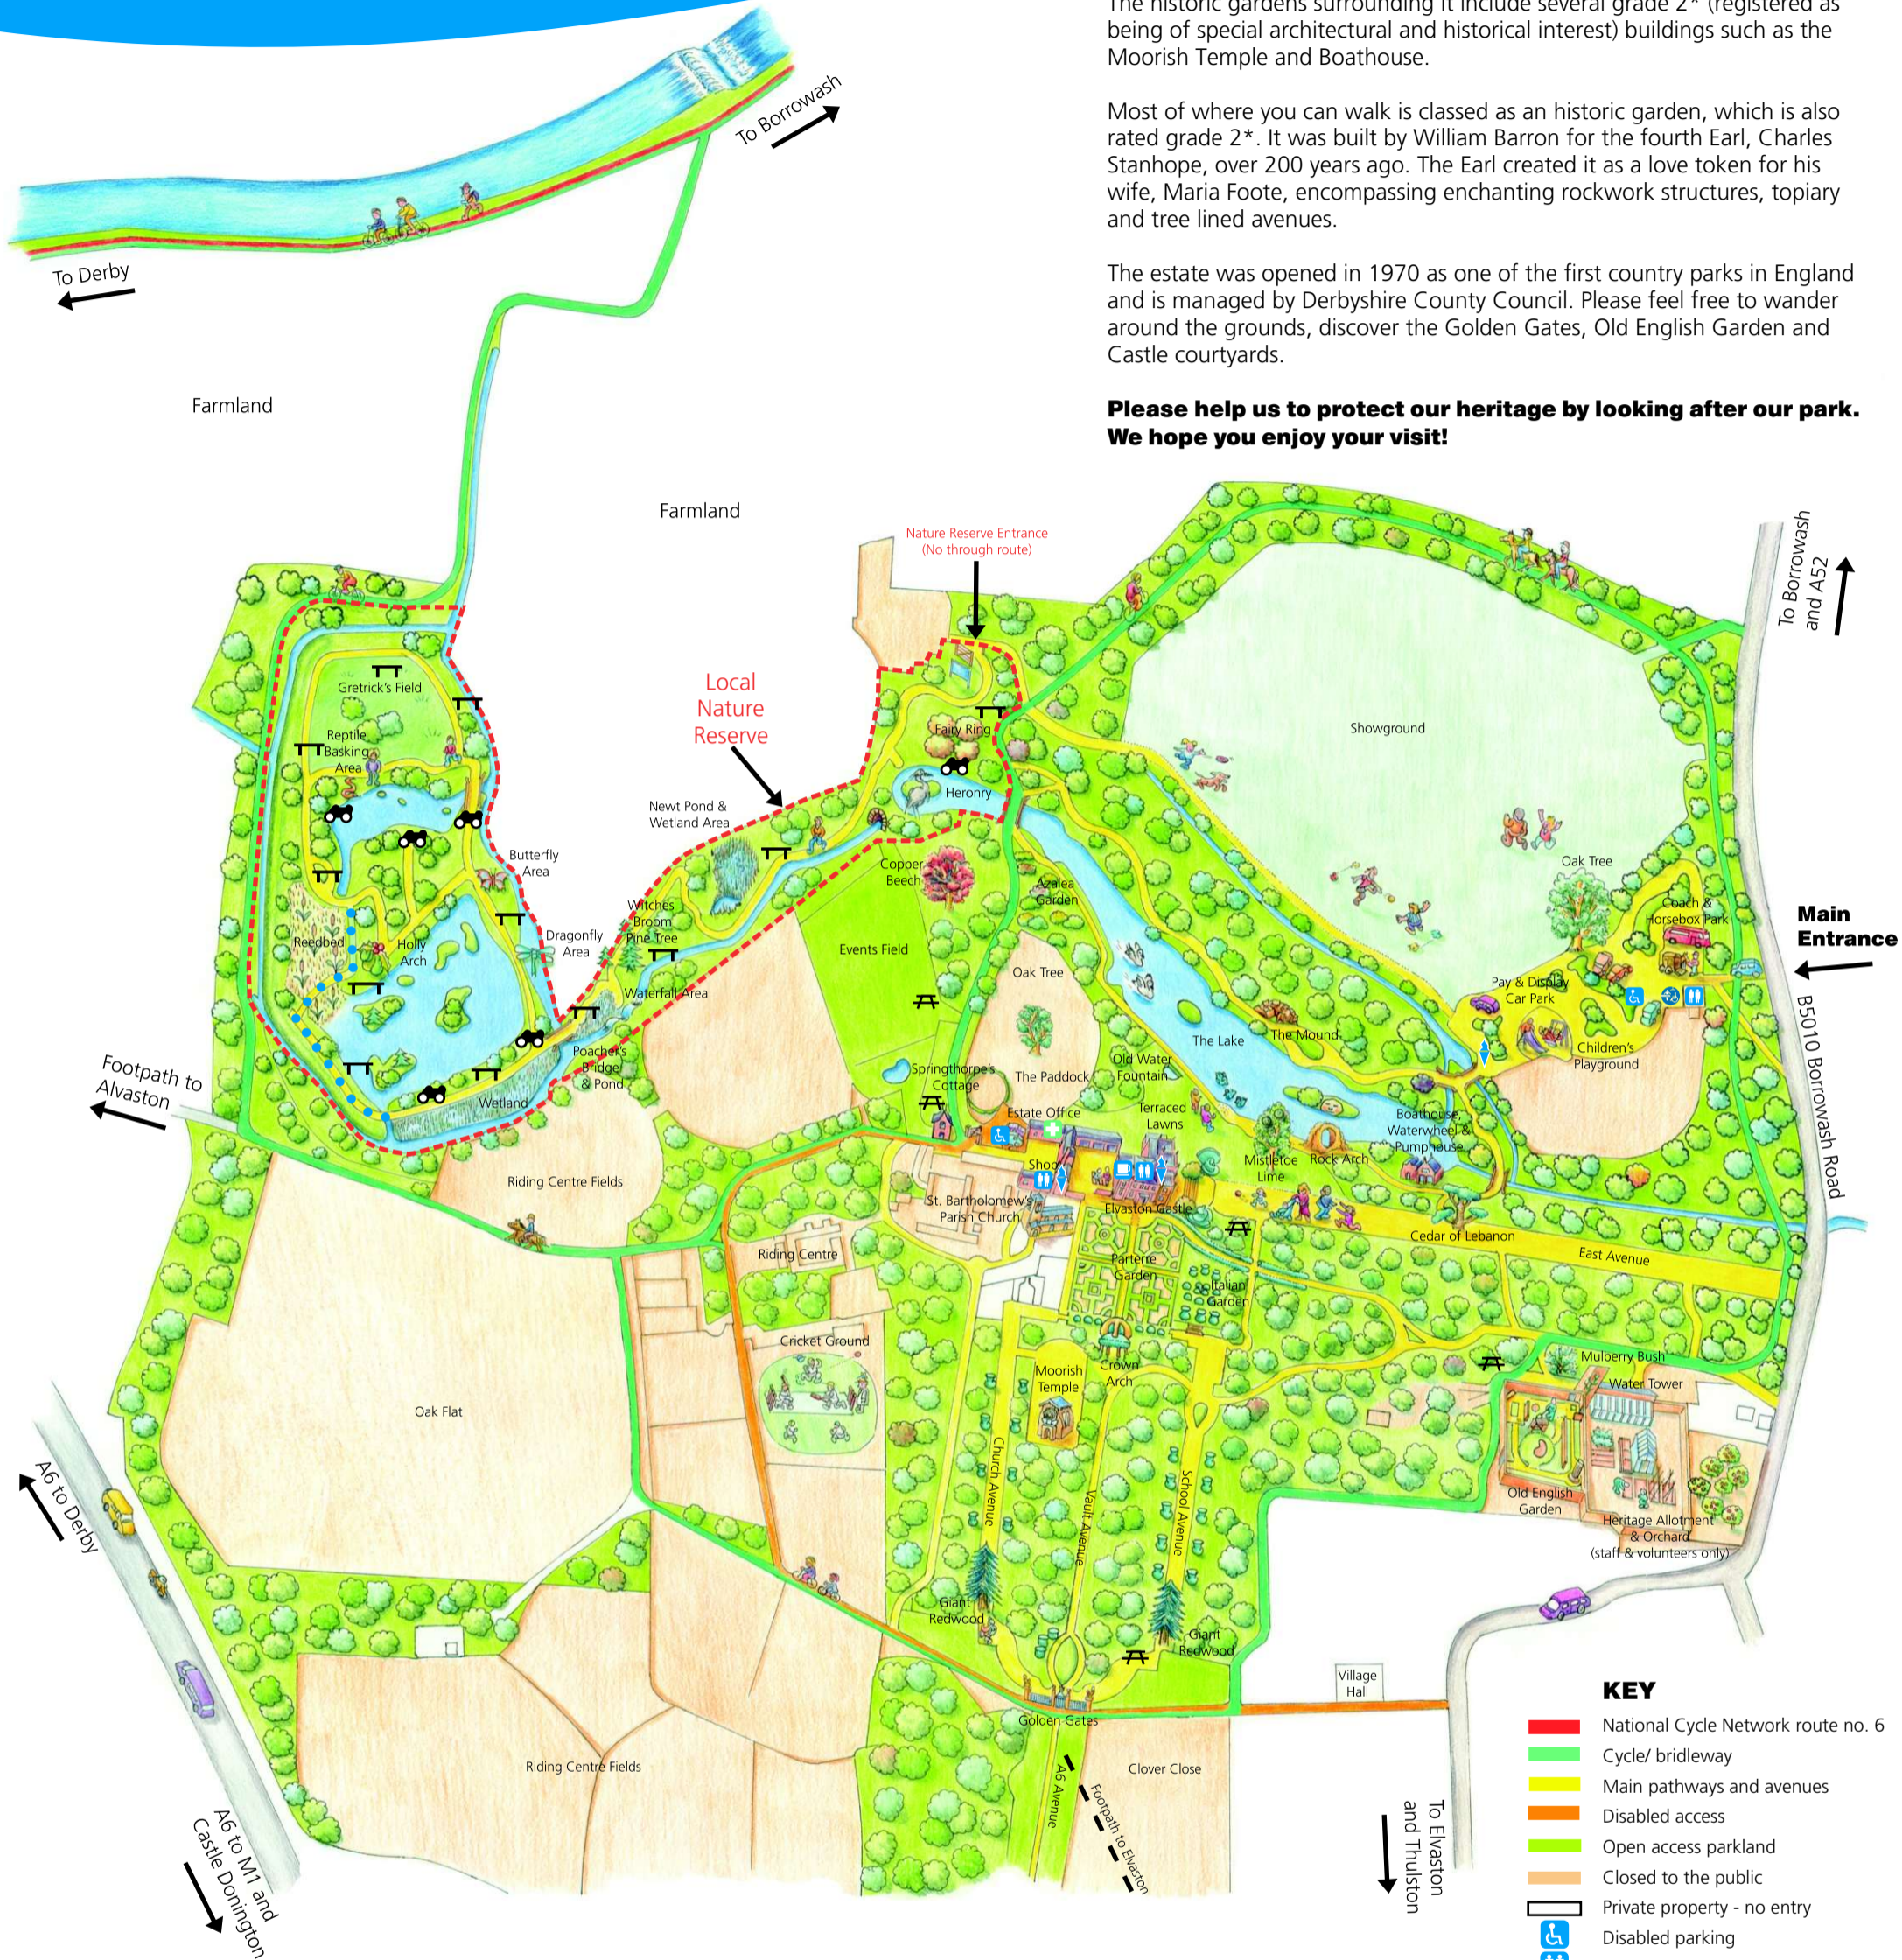

Welcome to Elvaston Castle Country Park

The 'Castle' was once the manor house for the Earls of Harrington. The historic gardens surrounding it include several grade 2* (registered as being of special architectural and historical interest) buildings such as the Moorish Temple and Boathouse.

Most of where you can walk is classed as an historic garden, which is also rated grade 2*. It was built by William Barron for the fourth Earl, Charles Stanhope, over 200 years ago. The Earl created it as a love token for his wife, Maria Foote, encompassing enchanting rockwork structures, topiary and tree lined avenues.

The estate was opened in 1970 as one of the first country parks in England and is managed by Derbyshire County Council. Please feel free to wander around the grounds, discover the Golden Gates, Old English Garden and Castle courtyards.

Please help us to protect our heritage by looking after our park. We hope you enjoy your visit!

Good users' guide to our parks

- 1 Good dogs and responsible owners are welcome. If your dog makes a mess, please dispose of waste in the special bins provided.
- 2 Please do not feed the birds, they have plenty to eat - unfortunately, the food just encourages rats.
- 3 Please use the litter bins provided. That way the park will stay looking good for longer.
- 4 This park is best explored by foot. If you do bring a bicycle, please keep to the marked cycle route around the perimeter of the park.
